Group Studies Student Code After Protest

By JOHN WALLAK
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

An interim student conduct code is currently on the drawing board as a result of last week's anti-Dow demonstration.

Pres. Robert D. Clark, working with the other six members of the Executive Committee of the Academic Council, last week appointed a special committee of faculty and students to draw up the document.

The committee is meeting this week in an attempt to have the report out early next week. It will seek to clear ambiguities and close loopholes in the existing code.

The existing code is a 14-page Presidential directive regulating the use of buildings and grounds. It is known as the Time, Place, and Manner directive, and was made college policy by the Academic Council at the conclusion of last semester.

However, it has proved inadequate because of inherent ambiguities. For example, it does not state who may use sound equipment, such as bullhorns, on campus. The directive states that only students may check out sound equipment from the Audio-Visual Department—but it does not state whether or not students or non-students may bring on to campus and use sound equipment acquired off campus.

The special committee is currently working on an interim code that will clarify these gaps in the present policy. Four faculty members and three students comprise that committee.

The need for a more precise code is generally attributed to the rise of student political activism on campus according to many college administrators and faculty.

continue their search for suspects.

Margaret Westfall, a non-student participant in the anti-Dow demonstrations, turned herself over to San Jose police at the advice of San Jose attorney John Thorne Monday afternoon. Thorne had been arrested during the disturbance for failure to disperse.

Police say Miss Westfall was identified from photographs taken during a confrontation between demonstrators and police. She is accused of hitting officers with boards when they began a riot formation sweep to clear Seventh Street.

WOMAN RELEASED

The young woman was released on her own recognizance shortly after she contacted authorities.

Richard B. Kaufman, 19-year-old SJS sophomore and political science major, was arrested last Wednesday evening at his East San Fernando Street apartment for violation of a section of the California Military Veterans Code.

Kaufman, also identified through photos by police, is accused of burning the American flag during the first day of Dow Chemical protesting. He is one of seven demonstrators recently granted a mistrial on misdemeanor charges in a Marine table protest Oct. 10.

Police withheld the names of several persons sought in connection with the protests.

Thorne, legal counsel for the demonstrators, said trial for participants in the Oct. 10 Marine table and Nov. 20-21 anti-Dow demonstrations is set for Jan. 2.

He explained, however, that there was some conflict since some arrested persons had participated in both demonstrations and that the present date was set just "to clear things up." Thorne said a new date for the anti-Dow protesters can be expected.

NEW TRIAL

Nick Kopke, Ira Meltzer, Richard Kaufman, James Hurst, Adna Louie and Connie Kurz face a new trial Jan. 2 on misdemeanor charges against them for participation in Marine table demonstrations.

Clifford Ruesch, 21-year-old non-student, and his wife, Linda, 19, began 15-day jail sentences yesterday for resisting arrest during the Marine disturbance. Municipal Court Judge William J. Harris imposed the jail terms at the conclusion of a probation hearing.

The most recent demonstrators and their charges, excluding Kaufman, Thorne and Miss Westfall, are:

- Allen K. Davis, 22, SJS student, charged with unlawful assembly.

- Donald Kantor, 21, SJS student, arrested for unlawful assembly and resisting arrest.

- Thomas Good, 22, non-student, charged with unlawful assembly. He is a member of the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) Steering Committee.

- William Crebbin, 19, arrested for unlawful assembly and battery. He is a sophomore in tutorials.

- Doug Degher, 25, SJS graduate sociology student, accused of unlawful assembly and battery.

- Benjamin Falk, 21, junior in business management, charged with unlawful assembly. He is a member of the SDS Steering Committee.

- Phillip Stevens, non-student and American Liberation Front (ALF) member, arrested for failure to leave state college property.

- Audrey Eckhardt, junior philosophy student, accused of battery.

- Clifford Ruesch, non-student, charged with failure to leave state college property. Ruesch was also arrested during Marine table demonstration Oct. 10.

- Nick Kopke, 25, arrested on charges of unlawful assembly and failure to disperse. He was recently suspended for anti-ROTC demonstration in early October.

- Douglas Flynn Orr, member of Hell's Angels motorcycle club, Daly City, charged with carrying a deadly and concealed weapon.

- Michael P. Valosick, Daly City Hell's Angel, arrested for disturbing the peace.

- Dennis Harvey, 24, non-student, charged with battery on a

Dow Testimony Is Taped For Protesters Defense

By JOYCE AUGUSTIN
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

Two philosophy professors Tuesday concluded taping the testimony of students and faculty present at the campus demonstrations last Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. Arthur Cody and Thomas Mueller, who call themselves "friends of San Jose," collected the testimony to aid in the defense of those arrested in anti-Dow disturbances.

The four tapes will be sent to John Thorne, the attorney who defended demonstrators arrested in the Marine picketing, Mueller said.

He said the tapes also will be sent to the news media.

"A main objective of the testimony," added Mueller "is to discover whether the police came onto campus to prevent violence already begun or whether they actually perpetrated violence themselves."

Jack Ray, associate professor of speech, said he saw no violence until the police came on campus. He added however that he heard the police announce the assembly as unlawful and ordered the crowd to disperse before advancing onto campus.

Jim Noah, SJS public relations director, said he heard the police and Dean Stanley Benz ask the students to "Please disperse or I will have to declare this an unlawful assembly."

SJS student Phil Stevens, said he tried to enter the administration building to register for graduate school and was refused admittance.

He said that a police officer with Badge Number 107 struck him in the leg with his billie club.

"I was then dragged through some glass by a plainclothesman in a green suit," He added.

Bruce Johnson, an SJS student giving his account of the riot, said that the chair thrown through the administration doors was thrown by demonstrators.

The demonstrators according to Johnson became enraged when a policeman in the wedge coming through the crowd threw the chair at them, they then picked up the chair and threw it at police hitting the window instead," he said.

When asked if he felt the officer was throwing the chair merely to get it out of the way, he said no.

Clark Asks for Delay Of Riot Investigations

By PAUL COHUNE
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

President Robert D. Clark has appointed an ad hoc committee to supersede those committees already established to investigate last week's anti-Dow demonstrations.

The only body that isn't effected by the moratorium request is ASB President Vic Lee's student investigative commission. That commission will investigate the reasons for the recent demonstrations and actions of the school administration and San Jose Police.

President Clark's committee has ten days to determine an interim policy. The policy will consider punishment for campus offenses, questions of double jeopardy, ASB or civil jurisdiction, and suspensions and expulsions under a new constant policy.

The Judiciary hearings announced yesterday, will also come under President Clark's requested moratorium. Other committees effected by the moratorium include the SDS, AFT, and the Philosophy Department.

The committee contains four faculty members appointed by Dr. Clark; they are Dr. Harold DeBey, chairman, Dr. Robert S. Martin, Dr. Theodore Norton, and Dr. George Muench. The three student members appointed by Vic Lee, are Eric Mueller, Jose Alvarez, and Lew Solitske.

President Clark said the purpose of his committee was to "draft a set of procedures for student rights and responsibilities to be included in a permanent student code."

According to Lee, the reason that his commission escaped the requested moratorium is that, "students should investigate and make recommendations first on matters that concern them, and it is also the responsibility of student government to defend the rights and freedoms of the students."

Lee's commission, the first of its kind on any college campus, will begin its investigation Monday at 12:30 in Morris Dailey Auditorium. President Clark's committee had its first meeting Tuesday.

The five-member commission will make recommendations to Lee, or the Student Council, in an effort to create a more workable recruiting policy on the SJS campus.

"The decision to accept these

Dow Film Airing

A half-hour TV documentary concerning recent demonstrations against Dow Chemical at SJS will be shown this afternoon in E 132 from 4:30 to 5. Originally scheduled for viewing in ED 100, the new location was chosen in anticipation of a large audience. The program, produced by SJS's Radio-Television News Center was aired recently on KQED (Channel 9).

Members Claim Rift In SDS Over Policy

By MARC NURRE
Spartan Daily Staff Writer

A rift has developed among members of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) over the goals and methods of the organization, according to two members of the group.

SDS will meet tonight to discuss the grievances. No time or place has been named for the confrontation.

The controversy centers in two areas—the first is between members who are calling for a "revolution" and others who merely want to strongly influence the goals of society. The second is a personality conflict between members and those who want to lead SDS.

One of the two dissatisfied members, Bill Hutchinson of the organization's steering committee, said he thought the dissention could be blamed on the absence of communication among members on the ideals of the group.

"Frankly, we were too interested in short range things and not enough interested in where the organization wanted to go," Hutchinson said.

Although he emphasized that the friction began earlier, he mentioned one recent incident which is an example of his complaints.

KGO radio, a station in San Francisco, recently broadcast an editorial against policies and actions of SDS, and under provisions of the Federal Communications Commission the organization was offered equal time to reply.

Hutchinson said that the group's

Students Express Opinions On 1968 Olympics Boycott

By LINDA ARENA

Student opinion of the proposed Negro boycott of the 1968 Olympics is reflected in the following student comments.

—Harold Anderson, graduate student, social sciences: "I tend to sympathize with them. Whether it's effective or not is hard to judge at this time. It's just the beginning of their movement. But on the other hand, I feel they as top athletes have a particular kind of leverage that can be very effective."

—Gary Kinney, graduate student: "I think it's basically a negative approach. They could bring about a positive approach, like present the total number of points they accumulate to their respective country. Although I can understand their rebellion, I doubt if they'll be successful in carrying it out nationally."

—Sue Walker, senior: "It's headed by Cassius Clay. I think it's just a means to an end like most of the things they're doing."

They know they're good athletes. This is one of the outlets society lets them. Society lets them excel in only a few ways. I don't think they'll go through with it."

—Jim Blankenship, senior: "I don't agree with it at all. I don't think it has anything to do with the racial problem. I don't see that it's helping. It seems like it's building propaganda for the Communist nations."

—Howard Hildreth, senior: "I don't think they should do it because we won't win. But if it's true that the Olympic committee discriminates, then I think they should do it."

—James Glottonini, senior: "You get kind of indignant but you have

M.D. Says LSD Can 'Blow Your Mind Out of Your Ear'

IS THIS THE "WHITE CLOUD" LSD users seek? One acid user describes the sensation as the pinnacle, "like climbing five flights of stairs to the roof and seeing the world." All too often it is a short and traumatic trip to the bottom of nowhere.

Editor's Note: LSD, that odorless, colorless, tasteless, "instant nirvana," started out in 1938 with the greatest of hopes. When first synthesized by Swiss chemist Dr. Albert Hoffman, it was hailed as an answer in the treatment of alcoholism, schizophrenia and other mental disorders. Nearly every carefully controlled research project has deflated the scientific value of LSD. This article, first of two parts, explains why.

By PATSY MILLER
Spartan Daily Feature Editor

Before LSD, Fidel Lorenzana was an electrical mechanic. Now the counselor at the New Life Center—a San Jose rehabilitation center for drug addicts, he is afraid to screw in a lightbulb and he can remember little about his trade.

Go ahead, use LSD, says Dr. David Breithaupt, San Jose physician and backer of a free medical clinic for drug users. "You have every right to choose to blow your mind, but you must also accept the risk that you may blow it out your ear."

LSD, say the physicians and scientists is a hallucinogen drug which affects perception, thought, speech, memory and the reasoning processes. It may produce a state of ecstasy or deep-seated depression. For this reason LSD is called a psychedelic drug (mind affecting).

Who uses LSD? And why? There are the curious and the thrill-seekers. But a great deal of the users are intelligent, serious people. For many it is a search for God or introspection.

SPIRITUAL BONDAGE

Timothy Leary, ex-Harvard professor even formed a new religion with LSD as a sacrament. "Turn on, tune in, drop out," said LSD's high priest and one of his fellow believers did. Dr. Allen Cohen, ex-Leary researcher and now staff psychologist at Berkeley, is a Leary dropout. "LSD leads to spiritual bondage, not freedom," said the 30-time user, and he stopped taking it when he realized it was a "fake."

Some believe society, not LSD, is the problem. Dr. Thomas Gray, director of SJS health center, believes "acid" is only a symptom. "We live in strange times. It is a restless time, there is a deep bid to break out of the situation. It may represent deep buried insecurity, much deeper mental and emotional turmoil."

One doctor says the LSD user is "as alienated from society as the Negroes in the large city."

LSD seems particularly to attract the adolescent. During this period they are struggling with feelings of aggression and sexuality, along with the need to establish an identity. LSD can provide introspection and enable them to deny these feelings as well as give them membership in the LSD group.

LSD POTENT

One fact is well known. The potency of LSD is terrifying. One ounce provides enough drug for 300,000 doses. Says Dr. J. Thomas Ungerleider, psychiatrist specializing in LSD cases at UCLA, "Until more is known about the short and long term effects of LSD as well as how to predict who will have a bad experience, it must be considered a very dangerous drug."

To some, the LSD hallucinations are terrifying. Users see skulls and mutilated figures. The apparently well adjusted person can be thrown into acute psychosis requiring days or months of treatment. Past good experiences are no guarantee; the potential for harm is immense.

Bad trips can occur in the best of settings. College professors have blown their minds in good surroundings. There is no way to predict a bad trip.

Studies on set and setting reveal the unpredictability of LSD. Dr. Ungerleider and fellow psychiatrist Dr. Duke D. Fisher, report that even with soft lighting, carpets and experienced sitters or guides many persons have been hospitalized who have had up to 100 previous good LSD experiences. "There is no single factor that guarantees immunity from an adverse LSD reaction," they emphasize.

PERSONALITY A FACTOR

Dr. Gray believes that the user's personality is a vital factor in what happens on a trip. The person who takes LSD is generally "not well integrated, lacks basic goals, good family relations and good common sense."

If the potential user is basically healthy, relatively free of anxiety and hostility, the drug may have a positive effect. But if the same loss of identity and built up defenses occur or the mind is flooded with repressed conflicts, the user can go to pieces and stay that way.

LSD is not instant smartness or creativity. Although users report writing poetry, music and painting while on a "trip," it is rarely of any quality. An LSD experiment reported in the May-June 1966 issue of Canada's Mental Health states, "in spite of the apparent profundity of thought that the patient experiences, intellectual standards actually deteriorate. The person thinks less logically . . . communication is extremely difficult."

Dr. Breithaupt believes that these mind-altering drugs (of which there are about 100) should not be discounted all together. More research in the field of psychedelic drugs is needed. "All users have something to say and we should hear them," Dr. Breithaupt declares. "Millions of trips are being wasted." But he emphasized that they should be conducted in a controlled laboratory situation.

"LSD has little redeeming value," he continued. "It is dangerous and risky, even to use in a human research setting, but to be used on the street is to compound the dangers."

Day for Pres. Clark

Today has been set aside as a "day of concern" for Pres. Robert D. Clark by a committee called Your Educators and Students (YES).

(The official "Day of Concern" on campus racial problems has been rescheduled for the first part of December).

But today's rally of concern for Pres. Clark should be honored by all faculty and students at SJS.

For the need of a "day of concern" for Pres. Clark has grown considerably since the idea first took form a month ago.

Following on the heels of campus racial tensions — including his cancellation of the SJS-El Paso football game and postponement of the original "Day of Concern" activities — Dr. Clark was forced to face the biggest test of his "ethos" last week during the second day of demonstrations against a Dow Co. recruiter.

For those (faculty, off-campus citizens, and state officials) who have criticized the president for lacking courage and "giving in" to campus radicals and threats of violence, Dr. Clark's actions that day can only be described by Ernest Hemingway's definition of courage — "grace under pressure."

Dr. Clark, who had stumbled onto the situation after a ten-day trip to the Dominican Republic — stood engulfed in a sea of angry, emotional students and attempted to carry on a dispassionate, logical, and meaningful dialogue for nearly two hours.

And, in the end, Dr. Clark had passed the test once again.

Although the issue really had not been resolved, Dr. Clark successfully had communicated to the demonstrators his belief that their concern was legitimate and their ideas were well-come. Yet, he had not backed down from his own principles, either.

But, most of all, Dr. Clark — and he alone — had been able to pacify the crowd and avert the kind of violence that had erupted the day before.

And when the crowd quietly and peacefully dispersed, the students "voted with their feet" support for the underlying theme of today's rally: Carry on, Pres. Clark.

'Civilization Is Long and Painful Ladder'

'Stupid to Burn Ladder From Under Ourselves'

Editor:

Our house of reason has become an impassioned carnival of causes. It does not matter if it is the issue of whether or not a business should use the placement office, or whether the Mexican-American is properly represented, or whether the American of African descent is trapped in a subtle spatial limit, or whether the administration is dictatorial — the issue becomes a cause and the cause engenders anger and the anger forms clusters and the clusters excuse themselves as their own violent justification.

When a mob forms on campus and moves to block, to beat, to abuse, to destroy, it is no care whether the mob, once formed, is inspired from within or from without — either way the college dies.

The college is reason — more importantly the college is the successful development of reason as a method of avoiding the instincts of the herd. If it has not done this and cannot now do this, it is in every sense a failure.

Civilization is a long and painful ladder. It seems stupid to burn it from under ourselves because we are disappointed in the progress we make or because we cannot yet see the top.

Wars are not ended by smaller, slightly less maiming, local conflagrations. Peace is not achieved by knocking someone down with a briefcase lettered, "Freedom now." You cannot very successfully develop good intentions overseas if you are busy kicking your loyal opponent in the groin.

Each student, faculty member, and administrator, who cannot now sit on his hands and cave, toward the dread night of irrational spirits, black magic, death for its own sake, blood for the warm taste of blood.

And every fine mind, and each great book, and all men who ever struggled to rid themselves of fear, and those rarest of all creatures who have developed the spirit and the joy of thought, are all mocking wasted shadows of what might have been.

Is this to be our willful course?

'Suggestions for Election Were Frightfully Biased'

Editor:

I am amazed at the logic portrayed in yesterday's "Guest Room" by Evan Moustakas, associate professor of electrical engineering. The issues as he stated them, that he honestly felt could be placed on an ASB special election, were frightfully biased.

The first question, while debatedly suggesting that the incidents "interfered with and disrupted normal college actions," stated that the causes were students and/or faculty. This set up the obvious "no" when asked if such people have the right to do so.

Having established this negative attitude,

On Resolving Differences

Compiled By John Poiriroo

"The overwhelming mass of mankind in time and space have believed in a fixed social order, guided by those in authority which individual men and women are expected not to criticize but to accept."

—Adlai Stevenson

Tear gas bombs exploded on Seventh Street due to this philosophy. Nearly six million Jews were murdered, by the fascists, because of it. And our country will decay at its roots, unless we obliterate this parasitic thought.

"Not to criticize but to accept it" is the basic irritant which stimulates this cancer. There is a difference between being patriotic and being close-minded. Too often our pseudo-patriots rush in waving the flag and baring their stars-spangled bottoms in our faces, without the least bit of reflection, of their derrieres.

William H. Whyte Jr. said in his article, "The New Illiteracy," "It is wretched advice that the healthy system is one in which the individual feels no conflict. Every great advance has come about, and always will, because someone was frustrated by the status quo, because someone exercised skepticism, the questioning, and the kind of curiosity which, to borrow a phrase, blows the lid off of everything."

Without this blowing of the lid there probably would never be any growth in any society. In autocracy there is one thought. To differ is death. Thank God we have not reached that stage yet, though there are those who profess it.

What occurred during the Anti-Dow demonstrations, on campus, was a clear confrontation of the "blowing of the lid" against the "fixed social order." And the result was, "Don't criticize, Accept."

Mary Follet, author of Creative Experience, has said, "Truth emerges from difference." How are we to have that truth, if we disallow the difference.

One state senator in particular has emphasized that this difference does not belong on the university and college campuses of the state. It seems the only dynamic way this difference is emerging, is on the college campuses. Should this be halted, how could we evaluate truth, if there is no difference?

Surely we cannot unlawfully criticize the fixed social order, but when the criticism is in lawful context, it should not be controlled either. Until our society says we cannot speak freely against the "fixed social order," we have the right to do so.

It should be added, if we believe that the "fixed social order" is incorrectly structured, it should be our duty to criticize and correct that problem.

"To do one's duty sounds a rather cold and cheerless business, but somehow in the end it does give one a queer sort of satisfaction."

—Somerset Maugham

It seems a weak person and philosophy which cannot weather rational, empirical discussion or debate. If there is confidence in the "fixed social order," then it should be confidently defended.

Unfortunately, this does not occur. The defendants of it cry, "you can't criticize. You must accept!" And those criticizing reply, "Why?" The answer has been plainly simple—silence.

"I've never been hurt by anything I didn't say."

—Calvin Coolidge

Louisiana Gov. John McKeithen, speaking of the President's unpopularity in his state:

"The best chance to get Johnson defeated most soundly is to see that his name gets on the ballot—and perhaps underline it."

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., in Senate speech:

"The facts are that very few countries are supporting us in Vietnam in any meaningful way and that most Asian countries are profiting from the war while we and, of course, the South Vietnamese, do the spending and dying."

Mr. Moustakas in the third question asks if "we" are in favor of such demonstrations.

I believe that Mr. Moustakas is guilty of setting up his answers, the ones he wants to see. He has looked over the point that the police could have possibly had a hand in last week's disturbances, a question his survey should try to answer.

I have not yet made up my mind concerning last week, and I do not deny Mr. Moustakas the right to express his opinion. But his suggested questions do not come close to being honest. His opinions control his questions, making it slanted and biased and certainly unable to solve anything that happened last week.

SDS Member Rejoices Over New Napalm Policy

Editor:

The students of SJS have won a great victory in the fight against the military-industrial ruling class. Dow Chemical has announced that it may not produce napalm any more, and the news broadcast of Nov. 22 cited the massive demonstrations at SJS (the largest anti-Dow movement in the country) as a major factor, or at least the last straw.

SDS is heartened by the massive support shown to our common cause, and we hope that this event wipes forever the label "apathy" from the name of SJS.

There will be new issues to organize in SDS, and we hope that those of our student body who stood together against the cops on our campus, who walked with us on the picket lines, who went with us to STOP Dow will now join with us to fight for the issues which concern us all.

'Why Didn't the Judiciary Handle Demonstrators?'

Editor:

I have some questions concerning the recent ROTC demonstrations and suspension of some of the demonstrators. I hope that the ASB government and the administration might respond to these questions:

(1) Why didn't the ASB judiciary handle the case? If this was a case that should have been handled by the ASB judiciary, why didn't the judiciary demand that it handle the case?

(2) Why were the demonstrators given such unequal sentences? Roger Lette received no sentence at all, yet he readily admits that he was one of the demonstrators. Why is it that one of the demonstrators received a one-semester suspension, while the other two were suspended for a whole year?

(3) Most of the students and faculty members which I have talked to felt that a one year suspension was too harsh a sentence considering the nature of the violation. How does the administration justify such a harsh sentence, especially when one of the demonstrators received no sentence at all?

'Campus Really Needs More Law Enforcement'

Editor:

What this campus needs now to keep things from going completely to hell is more law enforcement. In recent weeks the police have shown themselves unwilling to enforce the law impartially.

Anyone who breaks the law ought to be arrested, including (1) right wing students and (2) policemen.

As was clear last week and earlier in the AFL-Marine incident, there are hypocrites on the campus and off who, though they speak loudly about the importance of law and order, approve of exceptions in both of the cases just mentioned.

Vietnam is a political issue, the cause of a dispute about what our national objectives ought to be. When the police, or rather a few people, take sides (in this case with the right wing) and refuse to enforce the law impartially, then they become the paid bullies of a political group.

A few bullies bring dishonor to a group of men which most of us have been taught to respect and teach our children to respect. In so doing they make police work much more dangerous and frustrating than it needs to be.

The only reason there is not more police partiality and brutality is that we will not permit it. It is our law. Seeing that it is properly enforced is in everyone's interest.

We must see to it that everyone who breaks the law is identified and punished. As a first step in the present situation we should investigate cases where the law has apparently not been enforced. This could be done by the ASB or the Academic Council or, best of all, by a combined student-faculty committee officially charged to report to both.

If you want to see that it is done, contact me at FO232, ext. 2137.

'Violence Exists When Will to Violence Exists'

Editor:

The Associated Students must understand that the nature of violence is like the nature of foul weather. As foul weather exists as soon as the clouds have gathered, not just when the lightning strikes, so violence exists as soon as the will to violence exists, not just when the mob has wreaked havoc on the object of its hate.

There is no question of when the violence started. It's been with us all semester. There is a question of when we will begin to take the concerted and decisive steps against it that it so blatantly dares us to take. So we do it now, while we still have the means to resist, or do we wait until it has flattened us?

A militant minority can succeed only in a climate of complacency. To delay is to forfeit our campus by default.

Letter Backs Clark, Lists SJS Needs

By WYNN COOK
Spartan Daily Staff Writer
Forty-five SJS faculty members have signed and circulated a letter addressed to Pres. Robert D. Clark, which lists several urgent requests and expresses confidence in the current college administration.

The letter suggests that recent events "reveal a lack of clearly stated principles based on faculty and student consensus."

According to one of its signers, Dr. Mervyn L. Cadwallader, professor of sociology and anthropology, two SJS professors initiated the letter to Dr. Clark. They are Dr. Robert C. Gordon, professor of English, and Dr. Harold J. DeBey, professor of chemistry.

DOUBT EXPRESSED
Those signing the letter expressed doubt that current policies and their manner of enforcement can prevent campus unrest. "Continuing disorder at SJS," the letter states, "would be disastrous for campus activities and would also threaten outside intervention which would destroy the possibility of a free and open campus."

The first appeal in the letter is for stronger enforcement of the president's directive regarding use of state college buildings and grounds.

Next, the letter asked that sole responsibility for requesting and utilizing police on campus rests with the college president and two vice presidents.

AIMS SUGGESTED
It was further suggested that Pres. Clark select a person to mete out student discipline. Reorganization of the Dean of Students office was also urged.

Within the next two weeks, the letter asks for the formation of an ad interim code "protecting proper student conduct and defining improper student conduct."

The letter also requests the appointment of a committee of faculty and students to draft a set of principles "defining and protecting a free and open campus." Such a committee, the letter suggests should function "outside normal channels of the Academic and Student Councils."

recommendations is up to President Clark," Lee said.

Witnesses will be called for the daily 1 1/2 hour sessions, to present the facts of last Monday's demonstrations.

Questions to be asked by the commission will include: Why was tear gas used? What were the reasons that prompted calls to the San Jose Police? And what were the aims of the SDS?

"The commission is attempting to legitimize itself by taking the initiative in probing into such areas of concern," concluded Lee.

to respect their right. I probably would do the same thing but I'd expect people to get mad at me."
—Linda Gasper, sophomore: "I think they're hurting themselves more than doing good. They're cutting off their noses to spite themselves. I think the Olympics is a once in a lifetime opportunity and it's a shame that they have to give it up."

—Milton Armistead, junior: "I agree with Harry Edwards. I read the coach's comment and it typifies the simple mind of the middle class American today. He's ignorant and blind to a real problem in this country today. The plight of the American Negro today cannot be overstated. And the time has come when the Negro must take a stand and be a man."

—Marilyn Legge, junior: "I think one reason they are doing this is that, in athletics especially, they are thought of as Americans, whereas in other fields they are thought of as just Negroes. It represents a poor picture of America to other countries. It's more important to work from within than to create even more separatism in the United States from protesting on the outside of your country."

—Kathy Kygar, freshman: "I don't think it's really necessary. They won't accomplish anything. Sports and politics are two different things and I don't think you should mix them together."
—Tom Mayberry, freshman: "I don't think that it's right, especially in sports, because that is the one field in which they are treated equally. I feel they're only hurting themselves."

—Jerry Meredith, freshman: "I agree with it. They should do anything they can to make the problem known and force the issue. That's just one of the many ways they can do it."
